It is good to get your anti virus online, because all of the best anti virus and anti spyware software can be found online. When you get an anti virus online, you can opt for things like automatic updates, so that your anti virus online or anti spyware online will automatically keep you informed of the latest threats to your computer's security. This is important, because hacking has become a big business.

Mafia companies will hack into your computer and take control of it, and threaten to flood a business with traffic, thus shutting down its electronic operations, unless that business will pay them millions of dollars. Although you can not stop them from doing this, you can stop them from hacking into your particular computer by having an anti virus online, as well as a good firewall.

Most of the time, if you buy an anti virus online, it will come with a completely free trial. This way, you can evaluate your anti virus online and see if you like its services and if it is user friendly and reliable for anywhere from a week to a month.

This is really nice, as it also allows you to see if your computer is currently infected for free. A currently infected computer is more likely to be infected in the future, which might give you a reason to buy your anti virus online after the free trial period is over.

The one risk you run by purchasing an anti virus online is a rare, but a serious one. Sometimes, companies will pretend to be selling you an anti virus online, but actually be giving you a virus in trojan horse form.

This is a virus disguised as an anti virus online which attacks your computer and infests it, then uses it for whatever nefarious purposes it was designed to execute. You can check whether your anti virus online is a reliable and accepted one by checking out consumer reports or some similar service which evaluates popular products for public usage.

You can also ask a friend if he or she has any recommendations for anti virus or anti spyware online software, as many people already have favorite software that they all but swear by. There really are many different products that protect your computer effectively, and its not like there is just one. Just don't fall for an inferior one.
